FLOOD WATERS FILL ARROYOSNEARJUAREZ

Torrential Rain Falls on the Mexican Side Late Tuesday Afternoon.

Heavy rain fell in the mountains to the west of Juarez late Tuesday afternoon. The storm approached a cloudburst, for the canyons from the mountains to the caryons from tains to the river, were overflowing with water. The Juarez plain, to the west of the town, was flooded and the arroyas were filled with the storm water. The arroya which empties into the river near peace grove, opposite the smelter viaduct, was running a small river of water Tuesday evening and the water was pouring out of Madero canyon, opposite the smelter, in such volumes that the current of the river was changed by the slit which was carried down by the flood waters. The flat on the Mexican side of the river was also covered with water and the river was raised several inches by the water from the Mexican mountains. There was also a heavy rainfall in the smelter district Tuesday afternoon. tains to the river, were overflowing

MAN GIVES VIEWS INTOXICATED VOTERS AND CLERKS

Evidence Shows that Many Tally Sheets Were Different, but Clerks Fixed Them All to Read Alike-Whisky Is Brought Into the Polls on Primary Election Day and the Day Following.

to be dismissed and other clerks substituted.
According to the testimony of the witnesses, whisky in a sufficient quantity was supplied to the precincts on the election day. Saturday, and on Sunday, when the clerks were totaling the number of votes cast. One wifes testifled that there were 16 or 18 pints of whisky in his precinct, and that, while he might not have been so intoxicated that he was unable to do his work, he was of the opinion that another clerk was.

Due to intoxication or weariness, or both, cierks, employed in some of the precincts in keeping the taily sheets, according to the testimony given Tuesday at the contest of the election, became so incapacitated that they had to be dismissed and other cierks substituted.

According to the testimony of the wiltnesses, whisky in a sufficient quantity whis supplied to the precincts on the election day, Saturday, and on the circle of the contest of the election day, when the clerks one withess testified that their sold some of them as sked for assistance to make out his ticket.

"In Brooks watched every move that it made.

The Yellow Tickets.

"Another thing that I recall, a number of votes cast, 16 or 18 pints of the mishing the number of votes cast, 16 or 18 pints of the mishing the number of votes cast, 16 or 18 pints of the mishing the number of votes cast, 16 or 18 pints of the mishing have been so intoxicated the history, he was unable to do his work, he was of the opinion that another clerk was.

The testimony introduced so far, as dediced on the part of both the contestents and the stand could swear under oath that the taily sheets would compare with the number of votes in the ballot boxes. It was admitted that there was a doubt as to whether the discrepancy would work a hardship in the case of the ring of the anti-ring. The witnesses stated that some times the ring clerk would be alread, and some times the anti-ring ticket for discrepancy would work a hardship in the case of the ring of the anti-ring. The witnesses stated that some times the ring clerk would be alread, and some times the anti-ring ticket for discrepancy would work a hardship in the case of the ring of the anti-ring. The witnesses stated that some times the ring clerk would be alread, and some times the anti-ring ticket for discrepancy would work a hardship in the case of the ring of the anti-ring. The witnesses stated that some times the ring clerk would be alread, and some times the ring the required number of roles of the policy and the p was of the opinion that another clerk was.

The testimony introduced so far, as deduced on the part of both the contestees and the contestants, conclusively shows that the result as taken from the tally sheets is not conclusive. Not a witness put on the stand could swear under oath that the tally sheets would compare with the number of votes in the ballot boxes. It was admitted that there was a doubt as to whetherthe discrepancy would work a hardship in the case of the ring or the anti-ring. The witnesses stated that some times the ring clerk would he ahead, and sometimes the anti-ring clerk, and in those cases, those keeping the tally sheets would mark up the required number of votes to make the tally sheets ballance. In this way C. L. Vowell, a candidate on the anti-ring ticket for d'estrict attorney, a witness stated, he knew lost one vote. This he said, he was positive of. As far as the others were concerned, he said that he was not certain.

Witnesses also testified Tuesday that there were a number of intoxicated persons who were admitted to the polls and allowed to vote. One Chinaman, who stated that he had only resided in this country two years, was not allowed to vote, and this fact, it was said by F. J. Schilling, who was presiding judge of precinct No. 2, started a discussion. Another Chinaman was compelled to bring his naturalization papers before he was allowed to cast his vote.

As far as the local roter was concerned, the state candidates for the most part suffered for want of votes.

About the greatest disturbance we had was when they sent for W. H. Burges. Burges said I had to let the Chinaman vote, and I said he could not. There was another who had a poll tax receipt from Tarrant county, and it was reported to this county. His name was on the tax rolls. He swore that he had lived here six months.

"I bawled out one of the fellows because he told me he had been drinking. It was strenuous. I held out Saturday and Sunday. I sent word to both sides to send new cierks. The discrepancy was four wotes. We counted the ballots three times. There were 12 of those ballots.

"They had four ways of saying how they wanted to vote: Some would say: I want to vote for Escajeda and his friends, or the ring ticket, or the antiring ticket; or, Alderete and his friends. That is the way they would ask to vote. They did not know the offices. About 50 of them went out of there without knowing work.

"The summing up of the count as to the absolute correctness, was guess work. Today I could not say that it is work. Today I could not say that it is a correct count, as compared to the ballots in the box.

"The first clerks would go to sleep. We had one old man, father of grown boys, he could not see. He was half asleep and trying to keep tally.

"Burges insisted that I should accept the Chinaman's vote. I don't know who sent him word. W. H. Burges never said to me that he was assisting the election."

It was admitted that Mr. Burges was ring man by the attorneys.

On cross examination the witness said: "When the anti-ring clerk was ahead, the ring would mark up with him." The anti-ring clerk, it is said, did the same. The witness said he was an anti-ring clerk. He said that Rodriguez did not know much about the tally. The ring clerks, he stated, did not look like they understood much about it, either. He said that he worked two hours, and then would lay off one. If there was a discrepancy he said he did not know who got the worst of it.

The witness said he did not know whether a witness who stated Delgado was at precinct No. 2 all day was mistaken or not. He stated that Delgado might have gone to that precinct. In answer to judge Peyton F. Edwards' questions, he stated that all the voters came from the east side. He said that Delgado, standing at the window, would be facing the voters who came up. He did not remember any Chinamen voting at the precinct.
